

FSDC Practitioner Speakers Series

How Big Data and FinTech Changed the World of Finance

// Synopsis

The global economy underwent substantial changes, and the rise of FinTech has brought in new financial institutions providing financial services to a large number of customers and investors, as well as changing the ways banks and corporations interact with their clients and each other.

In this session, a panel of distinguished speakers will share views and discuss how Hong Kong would secure an important role in the future of FinTech from the territory's continued competitiveness as a major international financial centre. The forum will provide great insight for university students and young graduates preparing themselves for a career in the financial services sector.
